Dear China Education Resources' Shareholders and Investors,

China is passionate about education and our relatively unknown company is at the forefront of massive new changes in the country's K-12 education system. I think you should know just how passionate they are about education. For example, I read an article by Kevin Harlin, last week in the Investors Business Daily, about the billions of dollars China is spending on education.

In the article, Kevin noted that analyst Alex Xu, from Brean Murray, Carret & Co. estimates the private education market is $10 billion. He also notes that Paul Keung, an analyst with CIBC World Markets estimates that public and private spending on education in China exceeds $180 billion each year.

We at China Education Resources believe that China will benefit from our CERSP internet portal with faster education changes across the entire country at a fraction of the cost to do it with brick and mortar changes.

I invite you to learn more about our online teacher training; China's largest online teacher training program ever. We are receiving numerous accolades in China from educators, trainee participants, government officials and the media.

I invite you to go to our website under "What others are saying about CER" and download two documents that show our progress and potential. China is excited about what we are doing and I want you to know about it. One document compiles and translates six Chinese news sources and the other one contains statistics we compiled from comments made by teacher trainees attending our current training program.
